(Committee Room)

This EMDR Europe Accredited level I Child Training introduces the use of EMDR with children and adolescents. It is open to therapists who have completed Level I EMDR. The focus is on clinical skills training in the basic adaptations of the standard EMDR protocol which are necessary when working with children. Designed for practitioners experienced in working with children and adolescents, it will also be of interest to clinicians in the field of learning disabilities, as many of the techniques and issues are relevant to work with this client group.

The training will consider the changing needs of children at different developmental stages, from 2 - 16 years of age, and how the basic EMDR protocol may be adapted to address these needs. Differences between adults and children in their responses to the EMDR process will also be considered, together with how to assess these responses in children. Determining when the use of EMDR is, and is not, an appropriate and safe therapeutic process to use with children will be explored, as well as how to screen for potential hazards, including issues such as attachment disorders and dissociation. Timing of EMDR in the therapeutic process will also be considered.

By means of video demonstration and case examples, participants will learn how to apply EMDR with children who have experienced past traumatic events such as road traffic accidents, bereavement, fire, and hospitalisation, as well as its application with domestic violence and specific phobias. The use of EMDR with children who have experienced prolonged difficulties; including bullying, bed-wetting, and nightmares will also be discussed. There will also be an introduction to the use of EMDR with multiple and severe and complex traumas in childhood.

Participants are encouraged to bring with them any relevant case material they might wish to discuss, since ample time will be allowed for both troubleshooting and for case consultation of existing or potential clients.

About the presenter.

Joanne Morris-Smith is a Consultant Chartered Psychologist who has been working in Clinical Child Psychology for the last 25 years and has worked in a number of large teaching hospitals. She is an EMDR Europe Accredited Child Trainer and also as an EMDR Institute Facilitator. She founded and chairs the EMDR Europe Child Section Committee and the Child Section of EMDR UK & Ireland, and has been incorporating EMDR into her clinical practise for the last 8 years. A former Deputy director of the Traumatic Stress Clinic, Joanne founded and runs a similar Child Trauma Clinic for the Blackwater Valley & Hart PCT (formerly the Surrey Hampshire Borders NHS Trust), which has been running since 1995. She also works in private practise specialising in work as an Expert Witness with traumatised children who have been exposed to physical/emotional abuse, domestic violence and murder. She has presented a number of papers on the subject at international conferences and is the Editor of an Occasional Paper of the Association of Child Psychology and Psychiatry entitled EMDR: Clinical Applications with Children. No.19. January 2002.
